

CRESCENT HILL BEEKEEPERS LEND A HAND TO NEIGHBORS

Crescent Hillians Lorie and Ted Jacobs and Cabrina Bosco have been lending their beekeeper expertise to help sister Neighborhood Clifton get into the bee business at the Clifton Community Garden of Payne Street. That's Lorie on the left in the photo, and Cabrina on the right, with Elwood Stroder in the middle.

Mike O'Leary, Chair of the Clifton Community Garden Committee and Elwood's partner, said the community garden project received two hives of New World Carniolan bees this spring and installed them in a remote part of the garden site in that large open space near the Sacred Heart Home. They fly up to three miles in search of nectar, and spreading pollen. But they are a gentle variety of bees, no relation to John Beluchi.

Mike said the inspection shown above, on March 8, found the bees in good health and very active, and suggested the gardeners can expect a harvest of honey this fall. Crescent Hill is home to more beekeepers than you might think. Watch this newsletter for an upcoming report that tells all.

The Clifton Community Garden people, incidentally, invite broad participation in the garden project, even from people on the wrong side of Ewing Avenue.

For more information visit <http://www.consuminglouisville.com/2008/11/get-involved-with-the-clifton.php>

MARKET ON FRANKFORT

(a locavore haven)

Saturdays 9am-1pm

Corner of Frankfort and Peterson

(Crescent Hill United Methodist Church lot)

Local produce, botanicals & art

(artists, musicians & weekend gardeners encouraged to participate!)

April 25-Nov 14

Serving Crescent Hill, Clifton & Clifton Heights Neighborhoods

Contact: oneness@insightbb.com

Continued from Page 1.

about straw-bale studio and garden.

There are many variations of the cottage garden style among the offerings. Some tend toward the formal, giving an air of calm. Others are more exuberant. Not to be missed are the two beautiful gardens of the Peterson-Dumesnil House, which have not been on the tour before.

Admission is $10. Tickets are available at Becky and Jack Guthrie's place, 205 South Peterson Ave. The gardens are in clusters, so that walking among them will be quite easy.

The Crescent Hill Garden Tour is, with tours in Audubon Park and Old Louisville, available in a "Passport" package, for which tickets are $27. If the tours are taken separately, the total cost of tickets would be $35. For more information please contact Judy Gogan at 899-1899. And you are invited to visit our new website, www.crescenthillgardentour.org